The trainings were implemented in both Lebanon and Morocco, offering inclusive, on-the-ground engagement that reflected the diverse realities of the region. These sessions provided a unique opportunity for community leaders to strengthen their advocacy skills, deepen their understanding of health rights, and exchange lived experiences across borders.

We’re pleased to announce the launch of data collection for our new study, “Assessing Tuberculosis Infection Prevalence, Predictors, and Healthcare Services Accessibility among People Who Use Drugs in Lebanon,” now underway at SIDC. Led by MENAHRA in collaboration with the Ministry of Public Health and the National TB Program, this important research aims to improve access to TB prevention, testing, and treatment for people who use drugs.
